Elaine Scarlett (standing just above the word "Mama") was joined by thirty members of her family for the dedication of "Mama Lane", to honor Mrs. Scarlett, who graduated from Monterey High School in 1935 and has lived on the family's Carmel Valley property since 1938.

Emergency Tips

The recent storms on the Monterey Peninsula served as an unpleasant reminder that earthquakes are not the only type of emergency Peninsula residents need to be prepared for. When the local office of emergency services issues an Advisory, Watch or Warning for any weather related phenomenon, it may apply to any resident of the area, not only those living in flood prone areas. Those living on or adjacent to hillsides must be aware of possible mud or debris slides and otherwise unobtrusive trees may become a hazard to roadways or powerlines in a storm situation. In essence, it is crucial that all members of the public

Tradition is the theme. First is the local Welsh celebration of their patron saint. (Yes, I am a Welsh descendant) March 1 is St. David's Day. Wales was an independent nation for over 900 years. St. David, head of the Celtic Christian Church, was their spiritual leader back in the early 500's. Unlike most other national saints, (Irish St. Patrick was born in Wales) he was a native son.

Over 60 members of the Welsh Society of the Monterey Peninsula gather for a traditional Welsh lamb dinner and their First Annual St. David's Day Eisteddfod on Sunday. An Eisteddfod (I-stead-fod) is a national celebration of the arts. A poet called "bard" is awarded a carved chair and reigns for a year. Singing, dancing and storytelling is also part of the celebration. The Llangollen International Eisteddfod held in Wales is known worldwide and attracts competitors from over 80 countries every year.

There were 12 participants at our first local Eisteddfod. Performers included: Christine Davies played the cello, (Mate Huw is the newly elected president.) Eileen Thompson explained the Welsh national native costume, Hilda and Wayne Rodeback recited a poem in Welsh and English, Professor John Jenkins recalled St. David's personal history, Virginia Parke read two pieces of her poetry, John des Forges gave a prose reading and local artist Bill Stone read a poem. The first two lines of the national song "Land of My Fathers" express the depth of feeling this tradition holds for the Welsh and their descendants. "The land of my fathers, the land of my choice, The land in which poets and minstrels rejoice;".

The CUSD Music Booster's Club continued the tradition of student support for the arts with a musical evening and spaghetti feed held at the Carmel Valley Community Center. According to organizer Joan Virgo, they raised approximately $500. These funds go to assist the band members trip to perform in the Heritage Music Festival in Las Vegas. The club also has raised funds with car washers and candy sales. There will be one more chance to contribute. They are holding a car wash this next Saturday at the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center. Many band members played along with Carmel High Music Director, Dick Robinson on Sunday. Watching the performance Danielle Latta, Jessica Kattan, Shelby Wilson, Arlene Petalver, April Allard, Mark Curtsinger, Matt Wall, Brandon Milligan, Bryon Christensen and Juan Martinez cheered on their fellow musicians. Parent Mike Mulligan staffed the donation table.

Elaine Scarlett received a surprise celebration of tradition from her family and friends Sunday. Over 40 gathered to name the small private street where she lives off Scarlett Road "Mama's Lane". Attending the campaign event were Eric and Helga Scarlett, Terri, Mike, Brittney and Skyler Scarlett, Steve Scarlett, Brook Miller, Trulee and Mike Ricketts, Jody and John Shaefer, Carol Williams, Judy and Bill Parham along with their family, Kim, Mike, Kelly, Jeffery, Stephanie and Melissa, Nancy and Chris Hubby, Joan Shirley, Gilbert and Irene Selfridge, Bill Daniels, Loren and Clare Wilder. Talk about an extended family. Congratulations Elaine!

In the tradition of community spirit here is an update on the 'Up The Creek Benefit' grant process. The amount raised to date is $25,587. There is $4,232 currently left in the fund to be distributed. There is still time to contribute. The final distribution is planned for April 1. Donations can be sent to: Carmel Valley Village Flood Relief at P.O. Box 149, Carmel Valley 93924.

Skip Marquard

Porter Marquard land development dynasty.

"Skip was born in Carmel. His father was an executive with Kaiser Industries. "We moved to Oakland until I was in the fourth grade. My parents moved out to Carmel Valley and built the house next to the Porter Marquard real estate office in 1948. I attended the old Sunset school. It was an exceptional academic and cultural arts institution."

"This area has been home for my relatives since the 1920's when my grandparents opened Robles Del Rio. They established a real estate office there in 1926. This office was opened in 1947. They started almost all the land development projects in this immediate area. Then my mother, Peggy Porter Marquard and my uncle, Paul Porter took over in the 48's."

"After school, I went into the service. I was posted to the Army Security Agency. My job was to listen to the world. When I came back, I started working with my uncle, Paul Porter."

" He was an incredible person. He loved this area. The 70's were probably the most exciting time for me in this business. I was only sleeping six hours a night. It is the creative part I really enjoyed and still enjoy. The challenge is making a project work for the people and the environment. It requires more than just making the numbers work."

"Now my family is very important to me. My brother Michael works in the business along with my first cousin and associate, Nancy Porter. My mother moved to Hawaii in 1958. My mate, Lynn is busy raising our son William, age eight. He loves go flying with me. My daughter Pam works for the Wm. Sonoma Co., San Francisco, in marketing and my son Michael is a builder in the Russian River area."

"I love taking the family and going to the Sun River resort area. It is a great place to fly fish, play golf and tennis. In the past, I would do five sports a day, ski, bike, golf, run and fish. Now I am down to four." Among Skip's other interest is coaching high school sports, primarily track.

" Track coaching at Carmel High was an awakening for me. I had a very supportive father and a great coach at college, Brutus Hamilton. I wanted to give back some of the gifts they had given me. I had a been very well trained in technique and my biggest challenge was relating to 50 teenagers. Track is the only coed sport, while they do not compete together, they do train together."

"Seeing students I have coached going on, not only in sports but academically, has been my reward. I guess my main message and philosophy has always been that getting along with others requires committment to communication. Be willing to listen and be open to ideas.

"I love hearing about peoples experiences and what changed their lives. I encouraged the students I coached, and everyone else I meet, to have a vision along with the determination to carry it out no matter what."

WHAT'S NEXT? Mel Vercoe

Well, here goes for some hair dye, and maybe a crew-cut, and off to the recruiting station with a birth certificate not exactly legitimate. They'd be suspicious, if I admitted I'd spent a couple of years on a battleship that was probably sold for scrap maybe 45 years ago. It's so darned unfair. We didn't have females on board.

But, now that it's a little late, we read about five female crew members on a carrier being transferred to shore duty, on account of somehow getting pregnant. How could that happen? Surely they must have put up notices to tell the two or three thousand red-blooded male crew members to stay out of the lady sailors' quarters.

Actually, I strongly favor having women in our armed forces, especially in combat units. Why? Well, first, women of voting age outnumber men of voting age. Therefore, if they wished to do so, they could establish policy in America, including our foreign policy, which seems to go out of its way to get us into shooting wars, generally just to keep our economy moving briskly forward.

Now, let's say body bags start coming home from one of our great missions to impress other countries with our greatness, and some of the bags, instead of containing young men just out of high school, would contain some young girls just out of high school. Dare we hope that wars might start looking a little bit less glamorous?

FROM WHERE I STAND Lee Phelps

Affirmative Action is racist.

That's the fundamental truth behind current efforts to begin undoing more than three decades of preferential treatment of certain minorities, based solely on their skin pigmentation.

Whether we speak of job hiring practices, university or college admission practices, the awarding of contracts for projects funded wholly or partially with tax revenues, or any other area in which skin color or ethnic origin is taken into account, there neither is nor can be any other description for it: it's racist.

Somehow, in the push for equal rights for all Americans, irrespective of race or ethnicity, the lofty goals of the sixties with which all fair-minded Americans could agree became perverted into something else. That something? Inequality of status under the law for anyone who didn't belong to a "hyphenated-American" minority (as in African-American, Mexican-American, and so on).

When any two people compete openly and fairly for a job, or admission to college, or to win a contract, or for any other purpose, there should be only one question: which of the two is the best qualified?

Any other basis is fundamentally flawed, antidemocratic and in the purest sense of the term, anti-American. No one should be given preference over a better-qualified person for anything, on the spurious notion that minority status somehow makes him or her more deserving than the better-qualified person.

Yet, that's how the equal rights battle has been perverted. Now, at both the Federal and State level, that racist notion is being -- or is about to be -- serious challenged. In congress and in the California legislature, efforts are underway to restore to us -- all of us -- the basic and fundamental right to equal treatment under the law. That's precisely how it should be.

The statue atop the U.S. Supreme Court Building holds the scales of justice, and she who holds them is blindfolded. There is a message implicit in that fact: those who administer our laws should do so "blind" to everything except right and wrong. And by extension, to the skin color of those who come seeking justice under our " . . . Nation of laws, not men."

Affirmative Action -- racial preferences, for any purpose -- is racist. It's unjust. It's simply wrong. And the time has come to eliminate it from the American scene.

That's how it seems, from where I stand.

LETTERS to the Editor

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

As a concerned citizen of Carmel Valley Village, I notice there are 2 very old cars parked at the Community Center. They really take away from the beauty of our park, as it is so very well cared for and it really shows beauty year around. (Someone gives tender loving care; please don't spoil the beauty.)

Please don't turn our parking lot of the Community Center into a used car lot. And if someone donated these cars for the Center to sell, please have them sell the cars and donate the money. They aren't kidding anyone, this is just an easy way to get rid of their junk.

Signed:
Helping to keep the Village beautiful
(Name withheld)

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

I wish to express my thanks to the fine, kind person that found my check and took the trouble and time to send it back to me. (Especially since it was made out to the Sun!)

Very neighborly. Thank you!
Donna Hamilton

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

On January 11th, the Carmel Planning Commission wisely decided to require an Environmental Impact Report (EIR) on Probasco - Lot D. This lot is adjacent to the Mission Trail Park which is designated Environmentally Sensitive Habitat. The Commissioners unanimously adopted findings to support an EIR because there may be significant environmental impacts on the park. This is a prudent decision and one that is required under the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) when such findings are made.

An EIR will explore these significant impacts, offer alternatives and/or mitigation measures and clear up uncertainties regarding the project. The results of the EIR need to be taken into consideration before any land use decisions regarding this property can be made.

Numerous concerns regarding this development were raised in public testimony, letters and in a petition with over 500 signatures. This project was opposed by the California Native Plant Society and the League of Women Voters. An EIR serves not only to protect the environment but also demonstrates to the public that it is being protected. (County of Inyo v. Yorty, 32 Cal. App 3d 795.)

Unfortunately this wise decision has been appealed to the Carmel City Council and the applicant is hoping the Council will overturn the Planning Commission decision. Mission Trail Park is a "bio-regional" asset and is enjoyed by residents of the entire peninsula and visitors alike. "Friends" of Mission Trail Park who are concerned about the environmental and aesthetic impacts this development will have, should plan to attend the City Council meeting on March 7th at 3:30 p.m. at Carmel City Hall. Write letters and/or contact Carmel City Council members at Box CC, Carmel, CA 93921. Your voice is vital. We must urge the City Council to deny the appeal and uphold the Planning Commission decision to require an EIR.

Sincerely,
Hugo J. Ferlito, D.D.S.

TOUCHING BASES

Tee-ball triple and mountain Dew . . . You've heard of Tinker to Evers to Chance; have you ever heard of Bochlje to Garnero to Saxton? Tee-ball in CV started about 11 years ago because Dennis and Robin Bochlje decided it would be a Good Idea. After three years of success, they tossed the ball and handed the tee to Nick Garnero who, after three more years and perhaps some understandable pressure from the distaff side, took off with softball and left the batting tee to Jim Saxton.

Now Nick will deny the following assertion most vigorously, but Jim claims to have learned everything he knows about tee-ball from Nick, whose carefully kept notes on all the proceedings will, according to Jim, soon be voted into the Tee-ball Hall of Fame in Roosterboot, Arkansas. (Drop in next time you're down that way.) Jim also assures us that the CVLL tee-ball tradition continues: it's all for the kids. Everyone plays, everyoné hits, every game is a victorious tic.

Suited to a tee . . . This year eight teams will don the colorful uniforms representing local sponsors. Though present figures aren't available at press time, last year over 130 leading candidates for Munchkin of the Month crowded the base paths -- sometimes five or six at a time. As of press time the Eagles and the Giants had yet to announce their leaders.

On the other hand we are proud to let you know that John and Tony Scardina will pilot the Sluggers; Brad Tucker and Mike Stone will have the Pirates; Jim Dunn will lead the Chargers; Bruce Dini is to head up the Panthers; Alan Koontz has the Falcons; and really quite fittingly, Peter Dew will lead the Bears out of hibernation.

Once the season begins, come on down to the CVLL ballpark early on a crystal morning. Tee-ball is really fun. How many of you have risen while the fog still clings to the hills and the dew to the grass in order to watch lebbenty-four members of the Mosquito Fleet buzz around the baselines?

Remember how they sometimes ran from home to third, or home to second, or home to Mommy? Remember how they occasionally blasted the tee further than the ball, or wondered who turned the lights off when the helmet fell down over the eyes?

Do you have memories of cups of hot coffee counteracting the chill seeping up through your turf-dampened pants? But do you also remember the valiant efforts of 5 to 8 year olds who, in the blink of an eye and the passage of a few short seasons, are suddenly swinging for the fences on the Old Field or staring down a pony-tailed warp-speed soft ball pitcher on the New Field?

Yes, do come and watch the future nervous and proud in its very own cap and jersey on our Valley morning base paths of bright promise.

Drafty out here . . . This is the time of year when inevitable disappointments result from the Little League draft. Jon Siegel and Mike Thatcher have had to bear the brunt of the concerned phone calls, though virtually every board member has had an earful. The purpose of the draft is to provide balance on the teams insofar as that is possible. Managers, like parents, are human. Managers do not draft players in order to lose games, and parents do not encourage their players into the tryouts in order to be disappointed. The system cannot, therefore, please everyone, and for a few very deserving young people, the draft is a chill wind that blows no good.

If you have a player who was not drafted to a level you deem appropriate, please do these three things. First, provide enormous quantities of love and encouragement (and keep some for yourself; you are a good parent). Second, encourage your child to practice with the team to which he or she is assigned. That way, your player will have a great advantage when the possibility arises to be drafted up during the season. (Little League rules give a manager the option of releasing a player who does not show up for practice.) Third, call Jon Siegel, the player agent, and present your concerns.

If you have hard evidence of unfairness, discuss those concerns with him before they are bruited about the community. And finally, we are forever looking for people who will serve on the board, who will coach, who will volunteer time to make our CVLL as close to baseball in paradise as we can get. Come join us.

Typograffiti #2 . . . Apparently mistakes creep in when you leave a Lyon out in the Sun too long. A couple of weeks ago, Sal Buffo showed up in a Boffo role, and last week Tom Ocampo was mislabeled as "Fireball," not "Firebell," an intentional pun on the Volunteers' support by the CV Volunteer fire department. Original floppy disk copies of this column are available under the Freedom of Information Act.

Right field, center field, left out . . . Last week we had no information on three teams, and now we do. Managing the Sharks will be Rick Smith; in charge of the Cubs, Pat Hannon, and bucking the Broncos, Terry Dombrowski (don't mess with that one, typesetter). Please welcome these good men to the ranks of our cherished volunteers.

Pssst . . . filthy lucre . . . Want to make a few extra bucks for the family? Brew up a big jug of coffee, bring it to early morning or late afternoon practice, and sell it at exorbitant rates to the frozen parents scattered about waiting for their kids. You'd make a million.

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

This past Monday, Carmel Valley Brownie Troop #2044 was visited by Mark Hastings, Ph.D., the Resident Manager of Hastings Natural History Reservation.

Dr. Hastings shared with the first and second graders habitat and breeding information regarding the Carmel Valley tiger salamanders and California newts. We learned that the newts that live to be about 20 years old and wait until they are 7 years to breed, are being squashed by the hundreds during breeding time when the newts attempt to cross upper Carmel Valley Road and travel to the breeding ponds.

The Native Californian tiger salamanders, found in fewer numbers, are also being squashed when they attempt to cross Carmel Valley Road to breed at the ponds.

But there is a practical solution, one that is used in England, that will enable the salamanders and newts to safely cross the road: a three sided, 5-inch-wide polymer concrete drainage culvert with a galvanized metal grate on top to let light shine through can be constructed across Carmel Valley Road so the animals can safely cross to breed.

Soon you may see signs for "Salamander Crossings" across upper Carmel Valley Road.

The Brownies appreciated Dr. Hastings taking the time to come talk with the troop and sharing information about the breeding plight of the salamanders and newts as well as the creative efforts of Hastings Natural History Reservation to "save the newts"!

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

Golf in the Kingdom

There are four major projects being planned in Monterey County that will have a significant impact on the quality of life for Peninsula residents. All four involve golf, and all face opposition in the present form. Before I discuss them, I believe some background is in order.

Despite the fact that golf is a major source of revenue for the Monterey Bay area, many people know little or nothing about the sport itself. Some view it as elitist, damaging to the environment, and as a sport for people who can't play "real" sports. All of these stereotypes are uninformed.

Golf does not require expensive equipment or apparel, country club memberships, resort accommodations, or the PGA. What it does require is humility, patience, and the ability to accept reality. I humbly submit that the people involved in the following projects should factor these qualities into their plans.

The idea of the USGA museum being "in" Monterey is right. Any proposal that brings 114,000 additional people into an area that is eternally congested and where there is no parking is wrong. The museum is for the general public; people from outside the area. Therefore it should be in a location that affords maximum access and parking.

Most people coming to the Peninsula drive by Monterey Bay (Ft. Ord) on Hwy 1 or Hwy 68. There is probably an existing building, complete with Bay view that could house the museum at least temporarily. There is room to build a building of almost any size and there is plenty of room for parking. It can't possibly cost $17 million to locate the museum on this site. And as far as the rest of the world is concerned, the museum will be located in "Monterey."

Most importantly, locating the museum at "Monterey Bay" would showcase Seaside-Marina as the "gateway" to the Monterey Peninsula and allow these cities access to some of the hundreds of millions of tourist dollars that are spent here. There is nothing wrong with these communities that a few hundred jobs wouldn't take care of.

Speaking of hundreds of jobs, the City of Seaside could create them by municipalizing the golf courses at Ft. Ord. These courses are both local secrets and national treasures. They were paid for by taxpayers and should continue to be accessible to both military personnel and the general public.

The USGA charter calls for them to support and promote public golf. Therefore I anticipate their cooperation for both of these projects. I am sure they want the museum in a place where the maximum number of people have easy access. I am certain they support public golf. And I am confident they want to respect the wishes of the greater Monterey Bay community.

For example, the City of Monterey should consider acquiring Old Del Monte, another national treasure, and operate it with a dual-fee system. Seaside and Marina must fight aggressively for their share of the tourism market by adopting innovative marketing techniques.

In summation, the billion dollar golf industry owes something to the millions of hackers who play simply because they love the game. Monterey, Golf Capital of the World, needs more public golf courses. It would be wonderful if the USGA would put its museum here. Whether or not the Peninsula needs anymore resort courses is debatable.

The only way to get more people into the area is an improved (but not international) airport in a different location (Ft. Ord?), rail transportation from the S.F. Bay area and Central Valley, and no-auto pedestrian malls in the downtowns of all Peninsula cities. More people with fewer automobiles will have more time to stop and smell the flowers . . . and to shop.

remain aware of changing conditions during a storm situation.

Harry Robbins, who heads the Monterey County Office of Emergency Services, recently answered Monterey County listener's questions as a guest of William L. Smith on his radio show, "Real Estate by Pacific Bay."

Robbins emphasized that in addition to the basic preparedness kit including a transistor radio, flashlight, drinking water, food and special wrenches to turn off gas and power mains, it is crucial to have a family plan ready to implement in case of any natural disaster. Many families tend to overlook the possiblity that they may be separated at the peak of a storm or earthquake and need to have a plan to reunite the family as quickly as possible at a prearranged meeting spot. If a situation occurs and you do find your family separated, do not tie up emergency phone lines and don't tie up the roadways, rely on the fact that all schools have emergency plans to care for children.
